Reflections on 35 Years in the National Park Service:
Highlights of Parks and Historical Sites in the Greater NY Area.

Randy Turner, recently retired from the National Park Service, has had a fascinating career, working at over a dozen sites in the Northeast, advancing from park ranger to manager, then to deputy superintendent. The Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island, the General Grant National Memorial (Grant's Tomb), Thomas Edison National Historical Park and the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area are just a few of the sites where he has worked. Please join us for a very interesting evening as Randy recounts stories about the parks he has cared for as well as those he has visited, apart from his work as a park ranger.
