Jaimee Uhlenbrock will discuss the issues faced by archaeologists working in conflict zones, or former conflict zones, with particular attention focused on the ancient Greek city of Cyrene in Libya. Cyrene was the richest of the five Greek sites in North Africa and is now a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Unfortunately, Cyrene also is a source of looted antiquities that then are trafficked on the illegal art market, while large parts of the unexplored ancient city are being destroyed by looters, as well as by modern building activities.

Jaimee Uhlenbrock, a classical archaeologist, is Professor Emerita in the Department of Art History at SUNY New Paltz, and is President of the Association for Coroplastic Studies.
